WORE A SCARLET COAT AND CAP Dressed in a scariet coat and cap, he led the team on to the field for practice. Bill Lange stood him on his head on first bose. For five innings there was not enough batting to keep the files from bothering the fielders. Stockadale tossed the ball

the fielders. Stocksdale tossed the ball in a tantalizingly easy manner, but the Colts were equally generous. The sin of pounding a cripple should not be on their souls until Washington should knock the chip off their shoulders.

FOUND TERRY IN THE SIXTH. Washington took the initiative in the sixth. But fifteen men had faced Terry up to that inning and only one hit safely With one out, Stocksdale hit a slow one to Everett. He threw the ball at Anson as though he was mad about something, and Stocksdale got to second. Then Boyd rapped out a two-bagger, and Selbach followed it up with a single. Joyce got his base, and Cartwright sent a grounder in among Lange's choice dahlius and geraniums.

He gathered up the ball with a sprig of invender and slung it to Everett. Sambo was looking hard at Jevne. The umpire tried hard to hold out, he debated the matter and the eyes got it. Joyce was sent to the bench. McGuire struck out, but three runs had been tallied.

Lange got a base in Chicago's half, and Second on Auson's out. Joyce's wild throw came to Dablen like the governor's reprieve to a condemned man. It was up to Byan. JOYCE AND ANSON HAVE A RACE. In the eighth inning Washington got a run on Selbach's three-bagger and Joyce's out. The third baseman hit a grounder to Anson and the old man and he had a foot race for first. Both dived for it feet fore-most, but the old man's Trilbies came in Capt. Havens tried a "has been" by the name of Berger behind the bat, but he showed plainly that his ball days were over, although the gentleman did the best that he could. Havens was better acquainted with that "special" delivery of the German had, so he gave way to Woodward in the fourth inning and Berger tried his lack at first base. This change was a very small, if any, improvement, for the Cashiers pulled the winning stroke after all.

The Treasury nine were by no means at The Treasury nine were by no means at their best, for their fielding was of a loose nature and they failed to come up to their average with the stick. They made plenty of errors, too, but they were not as costly as the ones made by the printers. It Was Intended to Have Kazan Rushed to the Front and Win the Race, But He Swerved and Was Beaten by a Length-Very Slim Crowd-Ham's Fast Dart

The bunco game at the Alexander Island track did its usual good day's business yes-terday, but for once they were thrown down in one of their schemes and the patrons of the track were the guiners.

The last race was the one selected to carry out a big coup, and but for an accident it would have gone through successfully Fagin was the favorite at even money, West Side was second choice, at twos, and until the horses went to the post Kazan was an 8 to I chance. At the last moment, however, the money came in, and Colton's horse went to the post a strong second choice at 8 to 5. West Side had but one mission in the race, and that was to kill off Fagin. Those who concocted the scheme knew they could not get at Frank Wier and therefore took the chance of killing off his entry. And they very nearly succeeded.

The attendance at the track was merely a light. The number who daily visit this robber's roost is constantly growing less and it is safe to predict that before the summer is over there will be no one left but a lot of strauded touts and owners and lockeys who have been ruled off respectable tracks for fraud. The first race, which brought a field of ten pretty rank dogs to the post, was such an open affair that nearly all of them re-ceived a play. The winner turned up in an eight-to-one shot, Finance II, who wonin a hard drive from the second choice, Me It was said that Finnwater was not quite

CORBETT HAS NO DOUBTS

Feels Certain That He Will Defeat Fitzsimmons in Their Fight.

Always a Possibility, However, He Says, That the Inferior Man May Beat the Superior by a Fluke.

A Washington man who spent two days last week at Corbett's training quarters at Asbury Park, and who has just returned to this city, says that the bicycle accident to Corbett on Wednesday will not interfere in any way with his forthcoming fight with Fitzsimmons because of the delay it will make in his training.

Corbett, says he, is always in condition to enter a fight; that is, he is abstemious in his diet; that he never neglects his regu-iar exercise, whether on the road or eisewhere, and that he carries at no time any superfinous flesh. Corbett stated to this gentleman that three weeks constant work with the gloves and his hand-ball practice would put him in condition to fight for his life. He added that he had no doubt as to the outcome of his prospective fight with Fitzsimmons.

He believes that he will defeat the Australian easily. He was never more confident in his life than he was when he met John L. Sullivan at New Orleans that he would defeat the champion handity, and he is equally confident of his ability to he is equally confident of his ability to best Fitzsimmons. He says that Fitz-simmons has everything to gain and nothing to lose by fighting him; that Fitzsimmons will be out of his class when he meets him (Corbett), and that there is always the possibility of the inferior man, in a scien-tific contest with the gloves, defeating the superior man by a fluke. He does not underestimate Fitzsimmons' ability, but says frankly that the Australian is a clever man.

He points to the fact, however, that he defeated the champion, John L. Suilivan, when the latter was supposed to be invincible and before any one had suggested that he was "stale," that he defeated Charley Mitchell, the champion of England, and that he forest Peter 1. and that he fought Peter Jackson to a stand-

Brings Suit to Prevent Collection of Umpire Murray's Fine (Special to The Times.) Cleveland, Ohio, July 25.—Catcher O'Con-nor, at the instigation of President Robisin.

The petition was filed in the court of common plens to-day, and it charges that Murray is not a competent man for an umpire, that he is unfamiliar with the game, and that there was no just cause for the imposition of a fine. It also protests against the absolute authority of an umpire to impose fine without characters. impose fines without chance for hearing or Secretary Robison, of the Cleveland Club, said to night that the managers are tired having players fined by incompetent um-pires, and that this method would be taken to put a stop to the practice whenever is became necessary. Murray got out of town before papers could be served on him, or bealso wouldbavebeensned.
